Dr. Julia Corcoran is a psychologist and currently serves as the Coach Training Manager and on the Ethics Board at BetterUp. She is responsible for training hundreds of leadership coaches around the world, and consulting with internal and external stakeholders about ethical, operational, and practical matters related to coaching. Dr. Corcoran combines her behavioral science training with a background in business and information systems to inform her work as a leadership coach and, previously, as a professor in business psychology and psychotherapist. She has worked in a variety of settings, including corporate retail, startups, small businesses, and healthcare. Dr. Corcoran is passionate about applying her expertise in research and practice in order to empower and educate.