HOW DO INTERNAL AND EXTERNAL ROLES DIFFER?

INTERNAL

- Typically within the organization’s HR Function → “Working on the Inside”
- Manage processes, lead a strategic agenda, provide ad hoc (or in rarer cases) regular consulting services
- Often broader-based and may require more people leadership to advance
- Longer-term, deeper relationships, reputation forms over time
- Steady cadence of work → often in the same office working on a defined agenda
- Typically less travel
- Advancement based on ability to influence senior stakeholders and versatility to navigate different types of jobs

EXTERNAL

- Consulting to a company → independent, objective, “Credible Outsider”
- Provide thought leadership, create content, deliver interventions
- Technically / expertise oriented → able to more directly apply consulting psychology background
- Short-term relationships (with exceptions), reputation formed quickly
- Episodic cadence of work → e.g., project based, week to week, business may ebb and flow, etc.
- Often high travel demands
- Must generate business to advance at senior levels

Trendspotting

• “Talent Management” is the new Human Resources

• Data and Analytics are heavily informing organizational decision making

• The profile of the HR employee is changing... in your favor → Job market is hot!

• Consulting psychology will continue to add value above AI, robotics and automation

Career Advice

• Start developing a “hip pocket” skill that differentiates you from the crowd → What can you do better than almost anyone else?

• Develop your Point of View and be comfortable expressing it

• If you aren’t playing politics, you’re probably not being as effective as you could be

• Your success will depend largely on how you negotiate Getting Along and Getting Ahead (Hogan/Evolutionary Psych)

• In a large company, most roles are about 50% defined (or less) ... and 50% whatever you want to make them

• If you aren’t uncomfortable, you probably aren’t growing

☐ When applying for jobs:
  ☐ Create a 2-3 minute compelling career recap (“elevator speech”) – you’ll use it again and again
  ☐ Frame up your resume and career story so that the job appears to be an ideal fit for YOU
  ☐ Your resume should ideally be a list of accomplishments, not job duties or tasks
  ☐ Take a mental inventory of your proudest achievements and be able to convey them as a narrative
